Primary research Superdry [6]

Thursday, 12 September 2024 6:19 AM

Primary research…

Primary research…

Primary research methods Superdry [6]

Sources for use with Section A

Extract A

Superdry

The Superdry brand focuses on high-quality clothing combined with Japanese-inspired graphics and logos. Its clothes are sold in more than 180 countries.

Superdry offer a wide product range, including t-shirts, hooded tops, dresses, jackets, shirts, footwear, bags and accessories, which are continually updated with new designs and logos. A sportswear range has recently been added to the product portfolio.

Ongoing qualitative and quantitative research, using questionnaires, interviews and focus groups provide Superdry with an understanding of its customers to enable it to meet their needs. From the research Superdry knows its customers are focused on quality and value for money, not price. Using customer feedback Superdry has designed a more feminine range for female customers and introduced sports and snow ranges.

Sources for use with Section A

Extract B

Superdry* launches a profit share plan for all employees

In 2016, Superdry launched a three-year profit share plan under which it will share some of its earnings with all 4,500 employees in the business worldwide. The plan is part of a strategy to attract, retain and reward the best employees.

At the end of the three-year plan, full-time employees in the shops are predicted to be awarded a total of £2 000. Shop managers are expected to be awarded £28 000, senior leaders up to £75 000 and executive team members £300 000, over the three-year period.

In 2017, at the end of the first year of the plan, £30m was shared amongst the 4,500 employees.

Analyse how two different methods of primary research could help Superdry. [6]