Recruitment & Selection

Unit 1 · 1.3.4.2 Managing people

Recruitment is the process of finding and hiring the right people for a job.

The process

Identify vacancy → write job description & person specification → advertise → shortlist → interview & select. The job description lists the duties; the person specification lists the skills and qualities the ideal candidate needs.

Internal vs external

- Internal — filling a vacancy from existing staff. Cheaper, faster, motivating (promotion) and the candidate is known — but limits new ideas and creates another vacancy.
- External — hiring from outside. Larger pool, fresh ideas and new skills — but more expensive, slower and the track record is harder to verify.

Recruitment, selection and training all cost money (advertising, agencies, management time, induction), so a poor hire is expensive to replace.